IN BRIEF

L. C. Armstrong: She used to customize vans in California. Now she fills a plastic net with a Styrofoam alphabet, freezes a waterfall of Bic pens in resin, makes a mutant typewriter ball, and airbrushes a series of skylscapes, sealing them in glossy membranes and labeling them with the date and time of their creation in braille. Her subject, in case you can't guess, has something to do with the inability to articulate. Through October 8, Bravin Post Lee Gallery, 80 Mercer Street, 966-2676. (Levin)
