Through Saturday, November 30

3. "Canyon Castator: Infidel!" at Postmasters

The young Los Angeles-based artist's second exhibition at Postmasters is full of exuberant, explicit paintings that look a bit like a peek into the inside of an addled person surfing the web (particularly one who spends a lot of time on Reddit), overrun with clip art and demented cartoons. The nontraditional press release—which is actually a poem by the artist titled "The Ballad of a Conspiracy Theorist"—suggests Castator is interested in how images can be remixed to obscure the truth as much as reveal it.

Location: Postmasters, 54 Franklin Street

Price: Free

Time: Tuesday–Saturday, 11 a.m.–6 p.m.; Thursday, 11 a.m.–8 p.m.
