

This Week's Must-See Art Events: Yams is Back, and Klaus Totes Have Sold Out

by PADDY JOHNSON WHITNEY KIMBALL AND CORINNA KIRSCH on SEPTEMBER 9, 2014

EVENTS

As a testament to how bad Chelsea has gotten lately, artists Jen Catron and Paul Outlaw are currently running a successful souvenir business solely of items making fun of celebrity-obsessed curators and James Franco. Things are bleak, but we've at least managed to find a few events that primarily have to do with art this week. The Yams Collective, who withdrew from the Whitney Biennial in protest, get their time in the spotlight. Also, a Lynn Foulkes screening, a look back at Vienna Actionism, a drag show, new work by Cao Fei, and a reading by Art F City "rising star" Deanna Havas are among the events that continue to make our jobs worth doing this week.